What Is a Pochade Box?

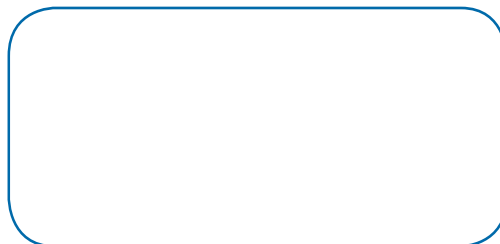

A pochade box is a compact, portable painting studio in a small box. "Pochade" is a French word meaning a quick sketch.

Traditional pochade boxes are characterized by three simple elements: a hinged lid that functions as an easel and a wet painting carrier, a palette and the lower portion of the box which contains paints, brushes and other supplies.

Traditional pochade boxes have come in many shapes and sizes and have been used for oils, pastels and watercolors. These ingenious, old-fashioned devices were used extensively by 19th century landscape painters. They had nearly become extinct until Guerrilla Painter® began making a modern version in the mid-1980s.
